| Collaboration(outline) | This was basic language and intercultural exchange. Each instructor did preparation and practice in advance with their own students. Then, the instructors and all students met together via Zoom, procedures were explained, and then students were put into breakout rooms in pairs or groups of three or four students. About 25 minutes of activities in Japanese were followed by about 25 minutes of activities in English. Finally, all participants returned to the main room for a brief wrap up. On the Nanzan side, there was some immediate follow-up discussion in the classroom after the session. |
| Duration of Collaboration | Each session was one hour. |
| How to evaluate students' achievement | Worksheets turned in by students with information gathered from partners. |
| Comment | There were some issues with background noise being in small classrooms and having some technical troubles the first time, but the second time things were better.It is always pleasant to work with Dickinson College instructors. |
