Project's Outline

We did a total of two synchronous sessions. Students met in small groups or pairs and each student met multiple partners. The students did basic information exchanges in each language and asked cultural questions, particularly related to student life. The Nanzan students also asked business-related questions, the answers to which will be incorporated in their final projects.

Evaluation

Worksheets with answers to specific questions. The collected data will also be used in International Business Proposals they need to make for final assessment in the course.

Teacher's Comment (Nanzan)

The activities went well and the students appreciated them, though in the first session power outages in the UK limited student participation. The time difference was more manageable than that with the USA and I hope to do a similar exchange again in the future.

Teacher's Comment (Manchester)

Especially against the backdrop of huge disruption caused by the pandemic, it was a great opportunity to really use the links created by our partnerships and utilise technology to give the students an extra dimension to their learning and bring in an added social dimension. Despite some difficulties this was success and I hope to do a similar kind of activity again in the future. My students and I are very grateful and I like it when technology helps people be people – together!
