Collaboration (outline)	A collaborative project required students from both Susquehanna University and Nanzan University to complete a written report on one aspect of Japanese culture and society. One group consisted of 7/8 members balanced between each university. Susquehanna University students were required to initiate and develop topics, while Nanzan University students complemented data by research and/or personal experiences.
duration	3 weeks
How to evaluate students' achievement	Nanzan University students were evaluated on their contribution to the project by submission of their written work and a report reflecting on the overall project.
Comment	Overall Nanzan University were positive and enthusiastic about collaborating with overseas students. Restrictions in America resulting from Covid-19, meant Susquehanna University students were meeting only online and this occasionally created issues for coordinating communication between groups. Comments from students were positive and this would certainly be a project I would like to repeat in the future.
