Collaboration (outline)	Students engaged in real-time pair work with one Nanzan University student and one Dickinson College student in each pair. About half the time was expected to be using English and about half using Japanese. Students on both sides had some specific language to practice and information to gather based on their own language studies. The Nanzan University students were expected to get some basic personal information and some facts about student life and work. In addition, they had to ask about popular businesses, which would then be used in their final presentations related to international franchising.
duration	one hour
How to evaluate students' achievement	Written report on interview and use of business information in final presentation.
Comment	Generally, the students at Nanzan indicated they enjoyed the experience of talking to peers in another country and learning more about student life in the USA. On the other hand, many also felt some strain and tiredness from maintaining a conversation in a second language (English) as well as one with someone for whom Japanese was a second language.
