交流内容	The students at UNG were studying Japanese linguistics, particularly Japanese dialects and gender in language. To prepare NU students for these discussions, students did research on Japanese dialects in Q1. Before discussions on ZOOM, NU students submitted discussion questions they planned to ask the UNG partners. I checked them and offered feedback, so that the discussion questions were well phrased and appropriate for the topic. I also saw a list of the questions that the UNG students were planning to ask the NU students beforehand. I selected some of them and shared them in class so that NU students know what to expect. Since discussions were mostly in English, previewing these questions gave them time to prepare what to say later. Students also practiced discussing the topics with classmates before holding discussions with the UNG partners.
評価方法	Assessment was based on homework assignment submissions, video presentations, and student reflections. The COIL project was worth 20% of the course grade.
